Field/Subject Area:
Open to all York students who meet the eligibility criteria

Position Description:
Terre des hommes has recently launched an initiative called Child Protection Hub. It aims at developing a strong regional community of practice and innovation in South East Europe, among stakeholders who are contributing directly to the development and delivery of child protection services (professionals, academics, decision makers, experts, users). The project strategically articulates 3 types of interventions (knowledge management, capacity building and advocacy) around a regional network of professionals and agencies, supported by an online platform. The Hub’s website and resources will be available in 5 languages: English, Albanian, Romanian, Serbo-Croatian-Bosnian and Bulgarian.

The Know-How Centre for alternative care for children is looking to hire two interns - a research intern and a marketing intern - to produce content for the Child Protection Hub and to promote the Hub in the region.

Specific tasks will include:
1. The Research intern will be contributing to the content of the Child Protection Hub online library. S/he will search through research databases, journals, online libraries etc. for the most interesting and relevant studies, best practices, innovative methodologies and tools in child protection. S/he will develop users’ friendly content, summarize publications and pieces of research, ensure translations of studies into other languages, produce abstracts and other easy-to-read documents, etc.
Requirements:
- A background in Social Science, International Development, Communications, Education or other relevant subjects;
- Excellent research, analytical and critical thinking skills;
- Excellent writing skills;
- Strong ability to communicate effectively in English, both verbally and particularly in writing;
- Previous professional experience in a research position an asset;
- Experience with websites is an asset;
- Knowledge of Serbo-Croatian-Bosnian, Romanian, Hungarian, Albanian or Bulgarian is an asset, but not mandatory.

2. The Marketing intern will promote the Child Protection Hub to a wide audience in the region, assist in developing communication materials for the region, including visual resources, video, audio, etc. S/he will also assist in organising webinars and other online events, including promoting the events, assisting with identifying the topics, liaising with the speakers, moderating the events and writing summary notes and learning points

Requirements:
- A background in Marketing, Communications, Journalism, Art, Social Science, Education or other relevant subjects;
- Experience with websites, digital tools and social media
- Experience in producing videos, podcasts and other interactive content is a strong asset
- Excellent writing skills
