GL/SP 4706 Hispanic Geopoetics (Winter Term)

Prof. Alejandro Zamora

Open to all York students, this year's edition of the course Hispanic Geopoetics will focus on the work of Gabriel García Márquez and will take us to the Colombian Caribbean for an 8-day field trip during the Reading Week (Feb 19-26). Students obtain a total of 6.0 credits for this Winter term course (January-April, 2023) + one week of field study.

While in Colombia, we will explore the geography and the oral narrative heritage of the region that populated the imagination of the Nobel Prize Winner, shaping the language of his iconic magical realism.
Organized in collaboration with our host institution, the University of Magdalena at Santa Marta, the experience abroad will give us the opportunity to interact with local students and faculty through different activities and visits, while engaging in collaborative projects and workshops with local communities and artist collectives.

The course is open to all York students with an intermediate level of Spanish (the languages of instruction are Spanish and English) and qualifies for 'outside of major' credits in any BA program, as well as for ‘major’ credits in the Spanish programs at Glendon and Keele.

Estimated total travel costs (accommodation, meals, local transportation, admin. fees): 800 - 1000 CAD + airfare.

Financial support is available through different programs, including York International’s YIMA.

Students must enrol by Oct. 30 and pay a non-refundable fee of 100 CAD on Nov. 4.

For further details contact: azamora@Glendon.yorku.ca